Dear Mr. Rosen:

I'm very sorry for changing your name. All I can say in defense is that as I was typing your letter I was talking to Steve Rosen at the Columbus Museum of Art at the same time. I know your name is Seymour!

Now, down to business. I am enclosing the application form which was filled out by Jonathan. As you can see, he put down that he was paying annual dues in the institution category of $35.00. Your letter states the institutional fee for membership is $25.00. He then filled out the category for one free hard cover copy of the book titled In Celebration of Ourselves for $35.00 for individual membership. I'm sure that we are considered an institution. After you receive your check from the Accounting Department at Ohio State, if you would then please let us know how much more we owe you, for either membership or book, I will then initiate another purchase order to pay you the difference. I am sure Jonathan prefers the hardcover copy of the book.

Your letter didn't quite clear up all of my questions, and I am sure that you now have some of your own to puzzle out.

Thank you for your quick response, and hope to hear from you soon with some answers.

By the way, why did you have to ask your brother?

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads 'Martha Logan'.
